This week in the history of cinema, almost 40 years ago, Apocalypse Now was shown at the 1979 Cannes Film Festival. Although it was presented as a work, Francis Ford Coppola's epic portrayal of the Vietnam War won the Palme d'Or at Cannes, as well as many other awards. Not unlike Martin Inn's character, Captain Willard, who went upriver to encounter the mythical Kurtz, the production of Apocalypse Now itself faced constant danger, uncertainty and near-death. The destruction of many sets of Typhoon Olga just weeks after the beginning of the main photo, the heart attack of the main star Martin Hina and the epileptic seizure of Coppola, hearing the news were just some of the factors that contributed to the film to be funny over budget and over the schedule. And then, of course, there was Marlon Brando, who, unwilling or unable to remember his lines, relied heavily on improvisation. His image on the screen also had to be collected from clever edits, using a shadow and stunt double to hide the fact that his real physique was all but strong and fit special forces colonel Kurtz he had to embody. Amid the chaos, heat, parties and alleged abuse of drugs and alcohol on the set of actors and crew, Italian cinematographer Vittorio Storaro was tasked with bringing Coppola's vision to life. Interpreting the film's main theme as a clash of cultures - super-imposing one culture over another - Storaro decided to convey this conflict by the contrast between artificial and natural light, or between artificial light and the darkness of the jungle. Armed with Mitchell's modified reflex cameras and Cook's anamorphic lenses, Storaro's cinematography in the film is characterized by the use of colored fog, high contrast, saturated colors and deep black, resulting in a warm palette that effectively conveys the atmospheric, hellish and nightmarish environment of war (for more information on color schemes and palettes, check out Richard's excellent article). Interestingly, this was Vittorio Storaro's first production with a foreign film crew outside his native Italy. Having worked before in the modest budgets of the Italian film industry, Storaro brought with him a low-key sense of what is needed in terms of lighting and equipment. Limitations and self-limitations can often prove useful in creative endeavors, and this is clear evidence: Storaro's work in Apocalypse has now gone on to win him an Oscar for Best Cinematography at the 52nd Academy Awards. Special NAGRA myCinema theatrical release Apocalypse Now Final Cut can be tested on a giant screen in some theaters across the country on August 15. Recovered from the original negativity for the first time in history, Apocalypse Now Final Cut is coppola's most realized version of the film, which has been nominated for eight Academy Awards®, has won three Golden® (Best Original Result, Best Director and Best Supporting Actor - Film, 1980), and is one of the 100 best AFI films. Starring ® Marlon Brando (1972, Best Actor, Godfather), Oscar winner® Robert Duvall (1983, Best Actor, Gentle Grace), Golden Globe® winner Martin Sheen (2001, Best Actor - TV Series, West Wing), Oscar® nominee Dennis Hopper (1986, Best Supporting Actor, Hoosiers), Oscar® nominee Lawrence Fishburne (1993, Best Actor, What Love Got To Do With It), and Oscar® nominee Harrison Ford (1985, , Best Actor, Witness), coppola experience an impressive cinematic masterpiece as intended. Francis Ford Coppola's stunning vision of heart of darkness in all of us remains a classic and compelling Vietnam War epic. Martin Sheen stars as Army Captain Willard, a restless man sent on a dangerous and mesmerizing odyssey to Cambodia to kill a renegade American colonel named Kurtz (Marlon Brando), who succumbed to the horrors of war and barricaded himself in a remote outpost. Apocalypse Now's Recovery Final Cut is about living with Dolby Vision® HDR, bringing entertainment to life through ultra-live image quality. Compared to the standard picture, Dolby Vision can deliver impressive colors never seen on the screen, highlights that are up to 40 times brighter, and black, which are 10 times darker. The 4K Combo Pack and Digital 4K release also feature Dolby Atmos® audio is mixed specifically for the home, for space and moving audio anywhere in the room, including overhead. In addition, the film has been expanded with Meyer Sound Laboratories' recently developed Sensual Sound™, a technology designed to bring audio below the limits of human hearing. All of these technologies work together to present coppola's true vision of a film that provides a deep, visceral visual and auditory impact. Coppola believes that Apocalypse Now Final Cut looks better than ever and sounds better than it's ever sounded and he's delighted to see the best version of the film. In addition to the restoration, this 4-disc Apocalypse Now Final Cut anniversary set also includes the theatrical Film Cut and Advanced Cut (Redux), as well as the acclaimed film Heart of Darkness. Loaded with hours of in-depth special features, the set will also feature a fascinating Tribeca Film Festival today with Coppola and the prolific Steven Soderbergh (Sex, Lies and Videotape), who has not been seen or heard outside the festival until now, and recently discovered behind-the-scenes footage. Apocalypse Now Final Cut 4K Ultra HD Combo Pack features new, collectible Mondo art and will be available at a suggested retail price of $34.99.
